"Now is the time for all good women to come to the aid of the party. We will do."

This was the message from the women of Maine to the New York Republican women at their "get together" luncheon at the Hotel Commodore yesterday. And the New York women responded fifteen hundred strong. "We will do."

They exchanged greetings by telegram with Senator Harding and Governor Coolidge, and they gave a welcoming storm of applause to the New York State candidates for office, including Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr. and Judge Nathan L. Miller, the candidate for Governor.

Miss Helen Varick Boswell, chairman of the women's division of New York County, presided, with the two most prominent candidates on either side of her and the long guest table stretching almost the entire length of the ballroom. Cards bearing the slogan: "Make New York a Republican City" were on all the tables and were referred to by several speakers.

Miss Boswell asked County President

Samuel J. Koenig to read the telegram from Senator Harding, which was as follows:

"I have been chosen to lead in the restoration of American representative government. Extraordinary as is the fact, it is none the less a fact that under a rule in this country which labelled itself 'democracy' even the fundamental doctrines of the Democratic party were forgotten and abandoned and we have beheld a real menace to the American Republic in the centralization of government and power and in the unwillingness of those who have enjoyed extraordinary war powers to relinquish them when peace came."

"We have had unpreparedness for war and unpreparedness for peace and reckless bungling with our American business and agriculture."

"The idea of an association of nations, which almost all Americans believe, has been so twisted out of shape because of the failure of those entrusted with our affairs to consult the will of the people, that an entire reconstruction of that idea now becomes necessary to unite the American people behind it."

"Be assured that if I am entrusted with the task of bringing America back to her main road I shall have no dearer to the counsel of my countrymen."

Coolidge Calls for Votes

The telegram from Governor Coolidge read:

"It is with a great deal of regret that I am not able to attend your luncheon on September 18, as that is the date of our state convention."

"The news from Maine is of such an encouraging nature that it almost seems the election is won. There is always danger of overconfidence, and no matter what the sentiment of the people may be, unless it is registered at the ballot box it is of no avail in deciding elections. One thing is apparent. That is that the vote of the women is turning to the Republican party. In that I am sure you will take great satisfaction."

Judge Miller refused, before the luncheon, to say anything in regard to the probability that the Legislature would again oust the Socialist members.

In his speech the candidate for Governor complimented the Republican women upon their energetic organization.

"I came down here from what I supposed was the center of Republicanism in this state to help inject a little enthusiasm into your campaign," he said, "but I find I am getting instead of giving enthusiasm. If this sort of thing continues we shall hold the entire state, from Erie County to New York, and we shall make true the slogan on your cards, 'Make New York a Republican City.'"

He devoted the remainder of his speech to a discussion of Article X of the League of Nations, saying that on this Wilson and Cox were in perfect accord, and that this was the one thing Harding and Coolidge proposed to defeat.

"The women of Maine proved the other day that they have been considering this subject with their brains and not their emotions," he said. "Maine is the first rebuke. It is only the first note, however, in the chorus which will ring over the country in November."

Senator Wadsworth received an unusually vigorous greeting when he rose to speak in celebration of his victory in the primary fight.

"Three cheers for Wadsworth! He'll get the women's vote, too," cried a voice from the gallery, which was drowned in applause.

Wadsworth Talks on Taxes

"I feel warranted in saying a word of special interest to women—and one that appeals to every man, woman and child in the country," he said. "It is on a subject not often talked about—that is taxation—and the financial and fiscal policies of our government."

"I have been told there is a special group of successful business women here to-day, but every woman is a business woman, as there is scarcely one who does not go shopping. Seven-eighths of the money spent is spent for life sustenance. When the housewife of to-day goes to the store every article she buys is taxed, directly or indirectly. This government, under the Administration which we have had for seven years is the most extravagant government in the world. We have spent money like water, borrowed with both hands and kept credit inflated. Of course, this has kept prices high. The women voters can do nothing more effective than to impress upon their neighbors this truth about the cost of government and cost of living, so called."

Other speakers and guests of honor were Benjamin M. Day, Miss Natalie Couch, Fiorella La Guardia, Colonel Lafayette B. Gleason, Gustave Hartman, Mrs. William Gerry Slade, R. Monroe Marshall, Miss Marguerite L. Smith, James O'Malley, Mrs. Mabel McKinley Baer, George A. Glynn, Mrs. Samuel S. Koenig, James A. Wendell, Mrs. John T. Pratt, Jeremiah Wood, Miss Mary Wood, James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Miss Helen Varick Boswell, Nathan L. Miller, Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore, Samuel J. Koenig, Mrs. Nathan L. Miller, Charles D. As Miss Alexandra Carlisle Mrs. Pfeiffer is well known as an actress. Besides Mrs. Pfeiffer, the saleswomen will hear Senator George H. Oglesby Has Lead Of 2,526, McKinley Of 19,140, in Illinois

Lowden Choices for Gubernatorial and Senatorial Nominations Ahead; 268
Chicago Precincts Missing

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—With returns in from all down-state precincts, but 268 missing in Cook County, Lieutenant Governor John G. Oglesby, supported by Governor Lowden in the race for the Republican nomination for Governor, to-night held a lead of 2,526 over Len Small, who was backed by Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago.

Returns from other Cook County precincts gave an average plurality of 40 to the precinct for Small. Results of the vote in the missing Chicago precincts will not be known until the official count next week, and consequently the race must remain in doubt until then.

For the Senatorial nomination Congressman William B. McKinley, Lowden candidate, was leading Congressman Frank Smith, of the Thompson ticket, by 19,140, with eleven down-state and 268 Cook County precincts missing. The county precincts reported gave Smith an average plurality of 35. Eight of the missing down-state precincts are in Adams County.

On the Democratic side, J. Hamilton Lewis, former Senator, continued to pile up his lead over Barratt O'Hara for the gubernatorial nomination and leads by nearly 85,000, with three-fifths of the precincts in.

The Democratic Senatorial nomination remained in doubt, however Robert Emmett Burke had 58,256 votes and Peter Walker 60,700 in 4,366 precincts out of 5,737.

Official tabulations in fifty out of 101 counties were completed to-day and in nearly every case they reduced the vote of every candidate, no one gaining any material advantage in the reduction.

Mrs. Robinson Completes Plans of Speaking Tour

Mrs. Corinne Roosevelt Robinson, sister of the late Colonel Roosevelt, called yesterday at Republican National Committee headquarters to complete her plans for a speaking tour in the Middle West. She will work under the direction of the Chicago headquarters. At headquarters yesterday Mrs. Robinson said:

"I am greatly encouraged at the success of the various primary campaigns, and feel that the victory in Maine points directly to what will happen in November. The nominations in New York State are of so high a character that I am convinced the Empire State will add a splendid quota to Republican victory. I feel that Republican success is more important this year than it has ever been in the history of our country. The issues are clear nationalism against internationalism; Americanism against all-the-worldism. These are the two great issues, but beyond that the Republican party stands for economy against extravagance, as was demonstrated by what the sixty-sixth Congress saved in appropriations. The nation needs such careful economy and it also needs a sound basis on which to stand as it used to stand before visionary idealism became the cult of an unstable Administration. Everything points toward Republican victory, but that only should excite those who believe in Republicanism to a greater and more strenuous effort to make that victory secure."

Major Henry S. Hooker, of New York, departed for Marion yesterday to offer his services in the campaign to Senator Harding.

Major Hooker was active for a year in the Leonard Wood campaign for the nomination. He was a member of the former New York law firm of Marvin, Hooker and Franklin D. Roosevelt.
